Better burgers, choicer chicken

BRIDGING a gap in the market between fast-food joints and full-service restaurants, fast-casual chains such as Shake Shack, Nando's chicken restaurants and Chipotle Mexican Grill are enjoying success across the world. The combined (0) ___ of American fast-casual outlets rose by 10.5% last year, (1) ___ with 6.1% for fast-food chains, according to Mintel, a market-research firm.

There are four main reasons why these outlets have (2) ___ customers. First, they promise "fresh" food, (3) ___ at the very least not frozen. Chipotle also says (4) ___, where possible, meat from animals raised without hormones or antibiotics, and organic and locally grown vegetables. Having once been controlled by McDonald's, Chipotle is now a threat to its former parent. Although (5) ___, it is enjoying 20% annual growth, quite a feat in the crowded restaurant market.

Second, they offer diners a high level of customisation, such as choosing each ingredient in a sandwich, burrito or burger. This appeals to fussy eaters and those with allergies. The service is (6) ___ as quick as at a burger joint but, it seems, quick enough. Some fast-casual chains let diners order (7) ___.

Third, clever pricing helps these chains optimise their profits. They offer some dishes at around the same price (8) ___ at burger joints, but they seem to be better than McDonald's at nudging diners towards pricier dishes and (9) ___. Fast-casual chains typically manage to squeeze 40% more out of each diner's wallet (10) ___ fast-food joints do.

Fourth, fast-casual chains often try to give each outlet a touch of distinctiveness. This distances them in (11) ___ consumers from the "corporate" feel of burger chains and their legacy of bad publicity, says Sophie Carroll of Planet Retail, another research outfit. Nando's, (12) ___, decorates its restaurants with South African art.

For all their success (13) ____, some of the fast-casual chains are (14) ____ that as they get bigger, they come under more scrutiny. Campaigners have recently criticised Chipotle and Panera Bread for using ingredients from genetically-modified crops and artificial additives — they say they are working to eliminate these.

Comings, goings, and baby boys

You never would have guessed it from the food on your plate or the atmosphere in the dining room, but for a while there in 2010 Paradiso was something of a bus station. It (0) ___ in February when our second chef, Glory, had a baby boy and ended a few days after Christmas when our head chef, Ro, had a baby boy. In between, a few other long-term chefs moved off on their adventures, two old hands came back (1) ___ short-term and another, Trish, came home, to our huge (2) ___. Both little boys are doing fine, thanks. Ro did an extraordinary job holding the kitchen (3) ___ in the midst of the chaos, and she is now on maternity leave while Glory has returned to become head chef. With all of the relatively new kitchen team committed to the long haul, we are looking forward to a stable and creative year.

Perhaps the most important change is no change (4) ___, but a recognition. Geraldine O'Toole, who has in practice been holding the fort and keeping the show together for a good many years now, has taken on the (5) ___ of general restaurant manager. Ger's energy, commitment and understanding (6) ___ Paradiso is about are the reasons the place has survived the past few years, and (7) ___ her the steering wheel is nothing but the sensible and smart thing to do. Drive on, girl.

Finally – those (8) ___ know Dave O'Mahoney, the laid-back and charming waiter in Paradiso who (9) ___ with us from when he was in short pants, (10) ___ a tear to hear he has gone to Australia in search of love and wealth. Fear not, Dave's a homeboy and will be back.

Pesky pests – bed bugs

29 October 2010

Bedbugs were almost wiped out in the 1950s. But now they're back. Experts are looking (0) ___ ways to combat the pesky critters.

"Sleep tight. Don't let the bedbugs bite!" It's a silly thing to say. But it's a real problem. Bedbugs hide in headboards, mattress seams and furniture until it's time to wander out in search of a meal, a (1) ___ of human blood. In the 1950s, a chemical called DDT almost wiped out bedbugs. But the tiny bloodsuckers have an amazing (2) ___ to survive. A few critters hid, ate and multiplied. Now they're back! And DDT is no (3) ___ used because it's bad for the environment.

In a recent survey of 1,000 pest-control companies across the country, 95% said they have seen bedbug problems in the past year. New York City is being hit the (4) ___. Bedbugs have been found in the Empire State Building, at the United Nations, in office buildings and in stores. On September 21, more than 350 people gathered in Chicago, Illinois, for the first-ever bedbug summit. One scientist showed how the bugs hop from continent to continent on clothing, suitcases, backpacks and purses.

Experts explained that the best solution is to (8) ___ bringing bedbugs into the home. People should be careful in places where surfaces meet backpacks and bags. Travelers should inspect hotel beds and headboards for signs of bedbugs.

Read the text about a study on the harmful influence of evening TV on children's sleep. In most lines there is a word that should not be there. Write these words in the spaces provided on the answer sheet. 2–4 lines are correct. Make a ✓ in the space if the line is correct. There are two examples (0, 00) at the beginning that have been done for you.

Evening TV affects children's sleep

Young children who watch television after 7pm are far more likely to have problems sleeping - especially if they will see violent cartoons. A study of three- to five-year-olds found that youngsters are allowed too much screen time were more likely to wake them up during the night and suffer from bad dreams. A team led by Dr Michelle Garrison asked whether parents of 617 children to report on their TV habits and if any sleeping difficulties they might have. They found one in five had trouble with staying asleep at night or being tired during spending the day for most of each week. Those who watched TV after 7pm had the most problems, with 28 per cent suffering sleep disturbances nothing compared to 19 per cent of those who watched little or hardly no night-time TV. About 60 children averaged an hour or more of violent TV daily, which included in cartoons. Of these, 37 per cent who had frequent sleep problems compared to 19 per cent who saw little or no longer violence. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends suggesting no screen time for children up to age two and no more than two hours daily for older children.
